THE TRANSVAAL CAPITAL CITY.

Boer Civilization.

CAPE Town, Dec. 11.-An interesting place from which the outside world gets httle trustworthy news is Pretoria. The enterprising newspaper correspondent has no show there. It is understood that the Boers are practically all in the field, and there would every box. 25c. be much suffering in the Transvaal capital if the families of the Boers possessed the wants of a higher order of civilization.

Everything at the Dutch capital has a military aspect. President Kruger directs the war from there, and the soldier sentries and a few guards about town are the only regulars not in the field. The city takes its name from Pretorias, the founder of the republic, a sturdy Dutchman, who led his countrymen in their last "trek" to the country beyond the river Vaal. The place has not the commercial importance of Johannesburg, where are the mines and the largest number of uitland s.

It is distinctively a Boer settlement, with the quiet of an agricultural community. In 1880 there was a fort in Pretoria which English officers and men entered when the Boers rose in reb llion and prepared for the great vicory at Majuba Hill. The Boers besleged the fort, killed a number of the inmates and took the remainder prisoners. The English flag was torn down and that of the republic put up.

Like all of the Boer settlements of the Transvaal, the church is given the most conspicuous position within the limits of Pretoria. The square which surrounds it is used for public meetings, those gatherings where by passionate appeals the Boer is roused to fight for the preservation of his home, his fields and cattle and his adopted land.

The parliament building is one of the handsomest in South Africa. In fact, the general character of the city is much more modern and artistic than one would expect in a place supposed to be an evolution of Boer civilization. It is located in a pleasant valley and is kept green by streams of spring water which riffle along every roadway.

A strange attraction of Pretoria is the museum, which is full of subjects indigenous to the country, collected ac cording to characteristic Boer ideas. In entomology they have specimens of the horn beetle and water scorpion; stuffed animals, such as the klipspringer, roebuck, water buck, lion and zebra; stuffed fish and preserved crustacea, which are all familiar to the visitor of the ordinary museum. In the ornithological department two birds are interesting, though their habits may be well known. One is the toucan, the male of which, knowing his wife's lack of domesticity, waits until she has laid her last egg and then fastens her up in the hollow tree trunk in which the eggs are laid by plastering over the aperture by waich she entered.

One of the familiar sights on the streets of Pretoria is a gang of conviets engaged in repairing or building highways. The prisoners are always guarded by a white warder armed with a revolver and a Kaffir constable bearing a long rifle. Most of these convicts are blacks, undergoing punishment for their misdemeanors, but there are most always a few whites also paying penance for their sins. The latter, however, are treated with very much more courtesy than the unhappy blacks. The whites are not forced, like the Kaffir prisoners, to wear the convict garb, which is marked with a conspicuous number, nor are their heads shaved as are those of the blacks. As a rule, the white prisoners

A peculiarity of the criminal side of life in the Boer capital is the frequency of the occurrence of public executions, which, oddly enough, do not seem to arouse the slightest excitement among the citizens. The victims of these official "necktie parties" are almost inva-

That is the statute making it a Practoria a Place Far Above the Average of crime punishable by death for black men to traffic in illicit liquor, and many a poor Kaffir is strung up for having in or on his person native "moonshine whisky." which, by the way, is pretty beastly stuff. His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from a frightful death. In telling of it he says: "I was taken with typhoid fever that ran into pneumonia. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I couldn't even set up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave great relief. I continued to use it, and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise."
